

To be a little more exact . . . The yield (to maturity) is the annualized rate of return that equates the present value of the promised cash flows to the current price.